A. The concept of development has been changing over time. According to the classical approach, development refers to the economic growth of a country. This is opposed to the new approach, which emphasizes social and environmental development.

B. Literature selected:

C. Coates, B.E., Johnston, R.J. and P.L. Knox (1977) Geography and Inequality, Oxford University Press.
2

2. The multinational corporations and inequality of development in K. Kumar (ed.) Transnational Third World Societies and Cultures, Westview Press

• Stoehr, W.B. and D.R. Fraser (1981) Development from Above or Below: The Dialectics of Regional Planning in Developing Countries, Wiley, New York.

• קליי, ג. (2002). תל אביב: נ. LOGO.